The Secret of Death Valley

Length, 600 Feet

A Thrilling Drama in Life Motion Pictures

Price, $66.00

Scene I. Seeking a Fortune.

The gold fever is raging. Many men leave their homes seeking a fortune. The riches of Death Valley induces five prospectors to go there and look for gold mines. We see the miners taking leave of wife and family in a most affectionate manner, not knowing if they will ever see them again.

Scene II. A Rich Claim.

Prospectors have been looking for gold all along the road. At last one miner was successful in finding a rich gravel mine. He calls his friends who seem to be very much excited over the richness of the mine. The lucky prospector stakes up his claim much envied by his companions.

Scene III. The Wife's Vision.

While the lucky prospectors went to sleep two of the less fortunate ones conspire to kill their friends thus coming in possession of the rich gold mine. Pretending to attend to the log fire they fail to go to sleep. In the dark of the night they shoot down their friends. While this murder is enacted the wife of one of the prospectors has a vision. In her dream she sees the killing of her husband, the father of her children. Shrieking she awakes and the picture vanishes.

Scene IV. Slain for Gold.

The two miners made rich by murder are seen to ride homewards, their mules packed with gold. Upon a small path where one miner is compelled to ride in front of his companion, the last one draws a revolver and shoots down his partner, thus becoming the sole possessor of the great gold mine.

Scene V. Ill-Gotten Riches.

The rich miner has built for himself a palatial residence where he hopes to enjoy his ill gotten riches. The visions of his dead comrades, however, follow him wherever he goes and make his life miserable. He is just showing his friend his beautiful home when the visions appear again.

Scene VI. Avenged.

The wife of the murdered possessor of the great gold mine was hunting everywhere for the murderer of her husband. She knows him from her vision. She saw him in the City and she followed him to his palatial home. While sitting there with his friend she suddenly enters, raises her revolver which she bought for this purpose and kills the murderer of her husband, thus avenging a great crime.
